UNICOR

CASE STUDY NO. 5
FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION
BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA

"The crews worked nonstop and were always courteous and professional. And though the move was challenging on our end, UNICOR met every deadline and made sure we had a place to go as soon as we were ready to get there."

TOM GLOVER - FAA OFFICE MANAGER

ANY SIZE, ANYWHERE

The Federal Aviation Administration's (FAA) field office in Baton Rouge, Louisiana stands as proof that no job is too small for the professionals of UNICOR. This 3,100 square foot space is efficiently broken up into private offices, conference and training rooms, reception areas and other common areas.

This building is the heart of FAA safety oversight responsibilities for all aviation activities in Louisiana. The inspectors and support staff who work here have a very important job, and it was up to UNICOR to ensure that the furniture in this facility would fully support this team's operations.

Multiple products are represented in this space, Crescendo, Bravo, Opus and Piretti Engage have all been put together in a harmonious mix of form and function. According to Tom Glover, Office Manager for the FAA, "We worked with UNICOR to create the furniture plan, and it was great. I would recommend them hands down."

TIMING IS EVERYTHING

The other integral factor in this project was the timing of delivery and installation. As Tom Glover stated, “We had people vacating one building and moving into this one. If any step was missed, we would have been in a bind.”

The responsive nature of UNICOR’s team, as well as their unwavering commitment to meeting deadlines, was key in this situation. The logistics of delivery and installation had to be flawless. Crews were scheduled and ready to go as furniture arrived from different UNICOR manufacturing sites.

The project spanned five short months, and ensuring every step was completed on time was critical to achieving success for the FAA’s team. With each new delivery, the installation teams worked long hours to meet their deadline. In addition, the UNICOR teams were always on-call to answer questions and troubleshoot any situation that threatened to delay completion of the project.

Tom Glover was very pleased with the final outcome. “The crews worked nonstop and were always courteous and professional. And though the move was challenging on our end, UNICOR met every deadline and made sure we had a place to go as soon as we were ready to get there.”

UNICOR

PROJECT FACTS

New Construction

3,100 square feet

6 private offices

2 reception workstations

Crescendo, Bravo, Opus and Piretti lines